Playboy billionaire and son of a New York City real estate tycoon, Mark Dare is living a great life, living in the city and operating his family's hotels, nightclubs and cruise ships. He loves his job, and his carefree, no-strings-attached lifestyle. When he agreed to be a celebrity judge/investor on the television show, The Celebrity Dare, he doesn't think about the show as anything other than a unique way to promote the Dare Real Estate Holdings name. By this, the second season, he's a television pro. When a gorgeous, vaguely familiar blonde woman walks on stage, he's instantly mesmerized, ready to buy whatever it is she's selling.

Piper Sloan is a woman on a mission to save the US food supply, one product at a time. An attorney who left her lucrative law firm job to start the business of her dreams, her friends think she's crazy, and they just might be right. Funds are running low and in desperation, she applies to be a contestant on The Celebrity Dare, certain charming and hunky billionaire Mark Dare won't remember their one night together, even if it's something she will never forget. She's desperate, willing to do anything to keep her fledgling company afloat.

Sometimes chemistry is more powerful than common sense. And the ingredients of love aren't always what they seem.

Connection to the Dare World:

Mark Dare is a cousin of all the Dare kids, legitimate and not. He is the oldest son of Robert Dare's estranged brother, Donald Dare.

Donald Dare has built a family real estate empire, Dare Real Estate Holdings, based in New York City. Mark frequents Gabe's nightclub, Elite.
