Conscience of the Nation: Writers, State, and Society in Modern Egypt Richard Jacquemond

Artfully combining social and literary history, this unique study explores the dual loyalties of contemporary Egyptian authors from the 1952 Revolution to the present day. Egypt's writers have long had an elevated idea of their social mission, considering themselves 'the conscience of the nation.' At the same time, modern Egyptian writers work under the liberal conception of the writer borrowed from the European model. As a result, each Egyptian writer treads the tightrope between authority and freedom, social commitment and artistic license, loyalty to the state and to personal expression, in an ongoing quest for an elusive literary ideal. With these fundamentals in mind, Conscience of the Nation examines Egyptian literary production over the past fifty years, surveying works by established writers, as well as those of dozens of other authors who are celebrated in Egypt but whose writings are largely unknown to the foreign reader. Novelists and poets, scriptwriters and playwrights, critics and journalists all have battled with and tried to resolve the tensions inherent in the conflicting forces of self and society.

James Harris:

As a student exactly feel bored for you to reading. If their teacher requested them to go to the library or to make summary for some book, they are complained. Just very little students that has reading's internal or real their leisure activity. They just do what the professor want, like asked to the library. They go to generally there but nothing reading very seriously. Any students feel that looking at is not important, boring and also can't see colorful pictures on there. Yeah, it is to get complicated. Book is very important for yourself. As we know that on this period, many ways to get whatever we really wish for. Likewise word says, ways to reach Chinese's country.
