What the Moon Saw Alison Potoma

It's nighttime in the city and the Moon is bright in the sky. The Moon sees everything that goes on at night, and is pleased to share what she has seen. This play is just right for your elementary and middle school students. Audiences will love these classic stories from Hans Christian Anderson, reimagined in a play where pajamas are the dress code. A drama for 50-60 young actors, where everyone has a line and no one has to be the tree.
