Pay the Piper, Dancer Pamela Jaye Smith

Hollywood is a hard place to be a failure. Perhaps even harder is to live with your own success. This novella is about pooling resources - of disenchantment, betrayal, and hope.

Plagued by the down-side of her theatrical accomplishments, famous director Felice has decided to drown her sorrows...and herself. Billy, a homeless young man from Santa Monica Boulevard's gay cruising market is looking to score. He breaks into the luxurious Hollywood Hills house where Felice floats face down in the swimming pool.

Hoping to find a quiet place to hang out alone or something to steal for drugs, Billy instead finds himself rescuing Felice. Angry that he foiled her plans for oblivion, she digs into his brief but troubled history. The initially combative situation evolves into a tenuous intimacy as the fragile gates of regret are battered down to reveal the sins and losses that haunt them both.

Trusting a stranger is often easier than trusting those who know you. Family, fame, drugs, love, disappointment, disillusionment...through the course of the evening, Felice and Billy challenge each other to face the truth about themselves, to connect again with their dreams, and to redeem their personal worth.

But can they move forward from this brief redemption?
