He said he'd never marry. As if.

Lacey

Grant doesn't believe in marriage. It's just not for him. He says it's a false promise, a fairy tale, something you can't count on. So what the hell am I supposed to do? I've been in love with him for seventeen years, ever since he first arrived on my father's vineyard. I was in high school at the time, now I'm in my thirties, and I just can't get over him.

Grant

There are certain things in life that will make a man do strange things. They can even make him go against his own nature. Love is one of those things. Lacey thinks I'll never settle down. She thinks I'll never tie the knot. She has no idea of the lengths a man like me will go to for the one he loves.

Lacey thinks I'm not the one, but I'll die before I let her end up with another man.
